

The Economic and Social History Society of Ireland

Annual Conference 2018

CALL FOR PAPERS

Queen's University Belfast, 30 November and 1 December 2018

Proposals for papers, or for panels of papers, are solicited for the Annual Conference of the Economic and Social History Society of Ireland, which will be held at the Centre for Economic History, Queen's University Belfast, on Friday 30 November and Saturday 1 December 2018. There is no conference theme this year; proposals relating to all aspects of economic and social history will be considered.

Queen's University Belfast has a long tradition in economic and social history. The University's School of History, Anthropology, Politics and Philosophy is a world-renowned centre for the study of social history. The University's Centre for Economic History brings together faculty and graduate students working on the economic study of the past from across the university and is one of the largest concentrations of economic historians working in the UK and Ireland today.

The conference will be held at Riddel Hall, a B1 listed building designed by W. H. Lynn in 1913. The facility is set in 11 acres of beautiful parkland, situated within the Stranmillis Conservation Area adjacent to the main University campus. Riddel Hall houses the University's Management School and Centre for Economic History.

This year's Connell Lecture will be delivered by John Turner, Professor of Finance and Financial History at Queen's University Belfast and Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences.

Abstracts of papers and proposals for panels should be sent to Dr Graham Brownlow (graham.brownlow@qub.ac.uk) by Friday 5 October 2018. Abstracts should be between 250 and 300 words, and panel proposals should include a title, contact details for all speakers and abstracts for all papers to be included in the session.
